A stronger commitment in Quebec

Mission inclusion is increasing its impact in Quebec by supporting 20 projects, including 10 new initiatives, in collaboration with dedicated community organizations. These partnerships help build the capacities of organizations that provide essential support to thousands of vulnerable people affected by social inequality, homelessness or food insecurity.

By working with youth, families, seniors and people at risk of or experiencing homelessness, Mission inclusion helps meet vital needs while laying a solid foundation for lasting change.

Supporting families to support intergenerational healing

The Isuarsivik Regional Recovery Centre, the only facility of its kind in Quebec, combines modern therapies with Inuit cultural traditions within a family-centred approach.

It helps people recover from trauma and addiction, enabling all members of the family to come together on the path to reconciliation and well-being.

Much-needed respite for people who give selflessly

La Libellule is launching a 48-hour weekday respite service, including nights, to give caregivers of adults with intellectual, autism spectrum or physical disabilities a much-needed break.

The project will support 26 families.

Breaking the isolation of immigrant seniors

The Aînées de la diversité project at the Carrefour d'action interculturelle is designed for extraordinary women who, despite age, isolation and obstacles such as language and discrimination, are trying to find their place in a new community.

The project creates welcoming spaces for discussion and mutual support where women recover a sense of community, a voice and hope for a future in which they actively participate in social life.

A dynamic international presence

Mission inclusion is working to build a just and inclusive world through concrete action internationally.

In 2025, the projects we support will impact more than 71,000 people in 11 countries. Our vision of international cooperation is based on inclusive, feminist, ecological, decolonial¹ and anti-racist values.

Balancing decision-making power between men and women

Mission inclusion has launched Le Fonds ACTION to support civil society and advocacy organizations that embrace inclusive governance and promote active participation by marginalized communities.

This program will strengthen our presence in Benin and Bolivia over the coming years by supporting initiatives to develop sustainable, community-driven solutions.

Action against climate change

In response to environmental challenges, Mission inclusion is dedicating itself to strengthening the resilience of communities to climate change.

In Chad, the RCIM² project helps women farmers of different generations adopt environmentally friendly practices, thereby improving food security and the economic power of the women and their families.

Empowering women and youth

In eastern and southern Africa, the ReSea³ project is restoring marine ecosystems and supporting sustainable livelihoods for communities in the Comoros, Kenya, Madagascar, Mozambique and Tanzania, with a particular focus on the participation of women and young people in the blue economy.⁴

Local solutions transform lives and inspire future generations

¹ In the past, colonial powers took control of other lands and imposed their laws and worldviews, creating inequalities and marginalizing the knowledge and cultures of the people who lived there. We take a decolonial stance which aims to listen to and respect these communities, right past wrongs and improve our ways of doing things, so that everyone is treated fairly and equitably.

³ ReSea: Regenerating seascapes for people, climate and nature.

⁴ Blue economy: Making a living from the sea and its resources while taking good care of them. The blue economy supports local communities, gives women an important role in decision-making, and protects the environment for future generations.
